

Devils Dance

The legend tells about a summer day
When the wind was warm and the sky was blue
A melody was heard above the whispering wind
But where it came from no one knew
As day did fade and turn into the evening
And eventually into night
An unknown player came and played the melody
(That) the wind had whispered so light

The player played with fury and enthusiasm
And people couldn't stop to dance
It felt as if it got a hold of them
So he smiled with fire in his eyes
He started walking out into the pinetrees
And the dancers followed on
The fire it got wider in his eyes
As the melody went on.

Dance, dance, dance said the music

And the people they danced
They said the Lord from above was plying
But oh how wrong they where...

The dance went on deeper in the forest
And swirled around the lakes and trees
The music carried on and so the dancers
Deeper into the night
In a glade upon a nearby mountaintop
The player sat down by a tree the melody still flew out from the flute
As the devil smiled and played on

Dance, dance...

Then when night did finally turn into the day
And the sun began to rise
The churchbells chimed in the valley down below
But noone answered the call
Up in the glade there was calm and stillness
Noone left to tell the tale

But if you listen as the wind is floating by
You still hear the melody he played
